TERMS OF THE DAILY DEMOCRAT TO THE COUNTRY. ONE MONTH 1 00

As we suggested yesterday, the caping of the rebei ship Florida in the port of Rahia may prove to be a blunder-a serious blun--worse than taking Mason and Slidell from the British mail eteamer Trent. It is almost certain that the seizure would not heve taken place in the port of a powerful military or maritime nation, and this does not improve the magnatimity of the affair. It is true, however, that international law is respected only so far as the nation is jured hes the power to resist or resent it. Magnanimity has very little to do with the matter. Ameri can ships were searched and American seemen taken from them to serve in the British navy, natil, feeble as we were in 1813, we resented it and went to wer.

In like manner, Braz'l may be provoked in to a quasi war, something like our French war. The possibility of justification we made yesterday was that the act had been done with the concent of Brizil; that in some way the Fiorida had violated her right of pentrality. and the authorities had permitted her seizure by the Wachnett. Later intelligence by the Kearsarge, which brought the dispatches an nouncing the scizure, shows that this supposition is incorrect. In the account in the Boston Traveler, derived from the officers o the Kearsarge, it is said : Haif an hour after the capture of the Fior

d, the Wachusett sizeted out to see with her When the day broke Captain Collins saw a side wheel sleamer towing a Brasilian man of war ou of Bahia, but he put on all sail and a full head of steam, and was soon out of sight and the chance intermediate.

This puts an end at once to any possibili of the seizure's having been made with the consent of Brezil, and it shows also an intention on the part of that power to retake the Florida by force if necessary. It will lend then, in the first place, to a strong protest on the part of neutral testions against the act That, however, if it leads to nothing else, we can bear-paper protests, like blank certridge dolog little horm.
With Brazil, however, it may be a more a rious matter. If she declares active was against us, her first end privateers will sweep off what little commerce remains to us. If however, she contents herself with merely closing her ports sgainst us, and opening them to the rebei privateere and war vessels, the damage will scarcely be less.

One great drawback to them, and a forme ate one for ns, bas been that the srmed vessor of the rebellion had no ports to which they could convey their prizes for sale, and no ports which might serve as a basis for operations This act of Brazil opening the ports to then and closing them to us until redress was made or the Florida returned, would be a decided lujury to us, and one which all the great pow ers of Europe would justify and delend. I would be looked upou as a comparatively mod redations of the Florids, which have exceeded even those of the famous Alabama, have exaspersted the people, particularly the may l officers, and at such a time but little regard is paid to the place at which the blow is struck, The galiant Captain was thinking more of ridding the seas of the Fiorlda than the consefrom the prese, seems rather disposed to exuit over the riddance than reflect on the manner in which it was made.

In the Trent case a similar feeling was exnibited. There was a burst of enthusiasm that Msson and Sildell had been taken. Congress thanked Commodore Wilkes. The Secretary of the Nary, ln a special order, thanked him, but warned him that next time he must take the vessel slee. We all remember the conclusion—that the two rebei embassadore were given up, and we backed rather awk nt the contrary, both at home and abroad.

wardly out of the scrape. It did us no good, Now, how would we feel if a somewhat elm that we must send back the Florida in the oluted out, the effect would be equally bad, Our only hope is that Braz'l will be content with spologics, which she can have of the am It has been the custom of the rebels, as well se of the political opponents of Abrahem Lincolo, to depreciate his capacity; to rea him as an incapable; as the tool of other men of more talent and will. It is idle to under rate the ability of an opponent, much less of one who has been so long in a presiston where his sets have been conspicuous. Lincoln showed great powers of debate in his contest with Douglas. The latter was unmatched in debate, either on the stump or in the Senst; and he never met one as near his equal as Abraham Lincoln. Some have suggested that campaign against Richmond had resulted in raham Lincoin. Some have suggested that the credit of this debate on the part of Lincoin is due to others; but the suggestion is inadmissible. His replies, made without time to consult, are as able as his speeches at the opening of a discussion. We shall not review his acts since he became President, and especially reproduced to execute Richmond as well as Atlanta, the Confederacy would have remained as erect and defaut as ever. Nothing could have been changed in the purpose his acts since he became President, and especially since he changed his course, controlled by events. It is enough to say that his means, extraordinary and indefeneible, have been scapted to his ends. He has maneged his own party in spite of disaffections and beaten his opponents. And, after all, the most ingenious and plausible defense of his conduct was written by bimself to the Albany meeting that denounced the practice of arbitrary arrests. His own partieans have discussed the subject elaborately, but they have not made as ingenious a defense and have added nothing new. The talent and tact with which he pursues the wrong only makes the matter wors:; but still he sees his way better than any of hie party, and they follow at a respectful distance and appland, whether at heart they approve or not. appland, whether at heart they approve or rot.

If any dare kick in the traces, father Abraham soon lorces them into line. If anything rational is done by the dominant party, if will be due to the asgacity of Abraham Lincoln.

They will all ances when he taken the course of the farmer, and rendered abortive the labor of the farmer. They will sli energe when he takes anus; he will see that they do.

Mr. The coln, asy some of our exchanges. is considering the question of peace—as Artemas Werd would as -- muchly. Judge Pierre pout, in a speech delivered in New York before the election, said that was to be the programme. Well, he has made war like-like gramme. Well, he has made war like—like to the course fuences of a struggle any body else in these latter days, and we would like to see him try his hand at making peace.

We suggest, however, that he does not offer terms as the white man wanted to divide the game with the Indian. The two had killed a aquirrel and a turkey, whereuped the white man seld: "You take the squirrel and I keep the squirrel." We hope Mr. Litcoln will not be so unfair in his terms as to make the vebels. be so unfair in his terms as to make the vebola decline in the language of the Lidiae, "You no say turk"y to me cace," but we are not particular since the election. Any way to make peace, so he makes it and makes it soon. Fire away, Honest Old Abe, make peace, so he makes it and makes it soon. Fire away, flonest Old Abe.

To the Senote and House of Representatives of the Confederate States of America; It is with astisfaction that I velcome you presence at an earlier day than neval for you section, and with connected that I have to aid of your counsis at a time of such public discency. The campaign which was commenced almost simultaneously with your reasion early in May last, and which was still it was a simultaneously in the middle of the simulation. on, and with confidence that I lavoke th progress at your adjournment in the middle of June, has not yet reached its close. It has been prosecuted on a scale and with an energy heretefore unequaled. When we revert to the condition of our country at the inception of condition of our country at the incertion of the operations of the present year, to the magnitude of the preparations made by the enemy, the number of his forces, the accumulation of his warfile supplies, and the procedulty with which his vast resources have been lavished in the attempt to render success assured; when we contract the numbers and means at our disposal for resistance, and when we contemplate the results of a struggle apparently so nor qual, we cannot fait, while rendering the full meed of deserved praise to our G nersis and soldiers, to perceive that a Power higher than man has willed our deliverance, and gratefully to recognize the protection of a kind Providence in cashline as successfully to withstand the atmost efforts of the ecomy lor withstand the atmost efforts of the enemy le our subjugation.

At the beginning of the year the State of Texas was partially in possession of the enemy, and large portions of Louisians and Arkness lay apparently defenceless. Of the Federal soldiers who invaded Tixes, none are known to remain except as prisoners of war. In Northwestern Lunisians a large and well-appointed army, sided by a powerful fleet, was peatedly defeated, and deemed itself fortune e in finally escaping with a loss of one-third lis number, a large portion of its military rains, and many transports and aunboat The enemy's occupation of that State is redn The enemy's occupation of that State is reduc-ed to the narrow district commanded by the guts of his fleet. Avkarans has been recover-ed, with the exception of a ten fortified posts; while our forces have penetrated into Central Missouri, affording to our oppressed bretheren in that State on opportunity, of which many have availed themsalves, of striking for libera-tion from the twanty to which they have been tion from the tyranny to which thay have been On the east of the Mississippi, in spite some reverses, we have much conse for grain-lation. The enemy hoped to effect, during the present year, by concentration of forces, the conquest which he had previously failed to ac-complish by more extended operations. Com-pelled, the before, to withdraw or seriously to weaken to strength of the armies of occupa-tion at discrent points, he has afforded as the opportunity of recovering possession of ex-tensive districts of our territory. Nearly the whole of Northern and Western Mississippi, of Northern Alabams, and of Western Tennessee are again in our presention; and all tempte on these States have been brilled. de entire ocean and gulf coast of the Con-deracy the whole success of the enemy, with the enormous navai resources at his mand, has been limited to the capture of the outer defenses of Mobile bay.

If we now turn to the results accomplish d by the two great armies, so confidently re-led on by the invaders as sufficient to seem the subversion of our Government and the subjection of our people to foreign domina-tion, we have still greater cause for devoul gratitude to Divine power. In Southwestern irginis, success ve armies which threatene would be looked upon as a comparatively medorate rebuke for a violation of the honor and dignity of a neutral port. It is the least that we would do under similar circumstances.

We give Captain Collins great credit for bis zeal in the matter, and also for his courage in taking the responsibility. We know the depwell taking the responsibility. We know the depmatter than the state of the first courage in the lower valley their General, readered dea

The army of General Scermac, although succeeding at the end of the summer in obtaining presession of Atlanta, has been anabl to secure any ultimate advantage from this success. The same General who, in February last, marched a large army from Vicksburg to Meridian with no other result than being forced to match back again, was able, by the sid of greatly increased numbers, and after much delay, to force a passage from Chattanooga to Albata, only to be for the second time compelled to withdraw on the line of his that we must send back the Fiorida in the condition she was when taken, or enter upon a quasi war with Brezil with results we have pointed out, the effect would be sanally had

The lessons offerded by the history of this was are fraught with ins ruction and encouragement. Repeatedly during the war have formidable expeditions been directed by the enemy against points ignorantly supposed to be of vital importance to the Confederacy. Some of these expeditions have, at immune coet, been successful, but in no instance have the promised feults been respect. Again, in the present campaign, was the deinelou tondly cherished that the capture of Atlanta and Richmond would, if effected, end the war by

The truth so petent to us must ere long be forced upon the reinctant Northern mild. There are no vital points on the preacration of which the continued exist noe of the Contederacy depends. There is no unitary success of the enemy which can accompite his destruction. Not the fall of Richamond, nor Weinington, nor Cherleston, nor Eavannah, nor Mobile, nor of all combined, can save the enemy from the constant and exhausting drain of blood and treasure which must continue until he shall acknowledge that mort continue until he shell acknowledge tha no peace is attainable unless based on the re-compition of our indefeasible rights. No such action has been 461 in by 12 Christian unifors of Europe as might 'not'y have been expected from their his.ory, from the duties imposed by international law, and from the cluims of humanity. It is charitable to attribute their conduct to no worse motive that in the their conduct to no worse motive that in

And the reasts why this duty is incumbent on neural powers to pishing apparent, when we riflet that the prida and prasion which blind the judgment of the parties to the coalict cause the continuates of active weefare, and consequent nameless stampiter; long after the incritable results has become apparent to all not empsed in the circuit. So long, therefore, as haulral as those fall by recognition of our independence to announce that, is that independence to announce that, is that independence to announce that, is their judgment, the United States are usuable to reduce the Confederacy to announce that, a their conduct will be accepted by our enemies as a sect encouragement to fact the ne ion seserting dominion is able to to automizator, their conduct will be accepted by our enemies as a test encouragement to continue their efforts, and me an implied assurance that belief is entertained by neutral nations in the success of their designs. A direct atimulus, whether intentional or not, is thus a plied to a curing a continuance of the carmage and devastation which devolute this continuent, and which they profess deaply to dunlare. deplore.
The d'aregard of this just, humane, and Caristian public duty by the nations of Enrope is the more remarkable from the fact that another than the fact that another than the fact that another than the fact that are the more remarkable from the fact that are the fact than the fact than the fact that are the fact than the fact than the fact than the fact than the fact that are the fact than the fact than the fact than the fact that the fact is the more remarkable from the fact that anthentic expression has long about been given by the Governments of both France and England to the conviction test the United States are unable to conquer the Confederacy. It is now more than two years since the Government of France amounced officially to the Cabinets of London and S. Patersburg its own conclusion that the United States were notable to achieve any decisive military success. In the answers sent by those powers no intimation of a contrary opinion was conveved; and tion of a contrary opinion was conveyed; and it is notorious that in speeches, both in and out of Parliament, the manbers of her Britan unic Mijesty's Government have not healtatan to express this conviction to unqualified terms The darful of our right we are these circumstances as so obviou; a man, and discriminates so untsiriy in favor or the United States, that neutrals have sought to pelliste the wrong of which they are exceeded by professing to consider in corrections. consider, is opposition to natorious truth an to the known belief of both beligerests, the the recognition of our independence would i the struggle—an intervection of which we dis-claim the desire and minims the advestage We seek so favor; we wish no interven-tion. We know curselves fully compoest to maintain our own rights and in dependence against the involure of our come ry, and we mil justified in esserting the without the aid derived from recruiting their comies from foreign countries, the luvadur would, ere this, have been driven from our soil. When the recognition of the Confeder-ser was refused by Great Britain in the fail o 1802, the refusal was excused on the ground that any action by her Mijasty's Gevernmen' would have the effect of influening the passions of the beliggerent and of preventing the return of posce. It is assumed that this opicion was electrically entertained; but the expertence of two years of needpassion carrage shows that it was erromous, and that the result was the reverse of what the British ministry humanely desired. A courtery policy—a policy just to use—a policy diverging from an neverying source of concession to all the demands of our enemies—is still withle the power of her Majesy's Government, and would, it is fair to presume, be producies of consequences the opposite of those which have unfortunately lollowed its whole coness of condect from the that any action by her Mijusty's Governmen isolowed its whole con-se of condect from the commencement of the war to the present time. In a word, peace is impossible witness independence, and it is not to be expected that the enemy will antil pate neutrals to the recognition of that ind pendence. When the bistory of this war shall be fully disclosed, the sim judgment of the impartial publiciat will for these reasons, be usable to absolve the neutral nations of Enrope from a share in the mosal responsibility for the myriads of human lives that have been unnecessarily sacrafted aring its progress.

The renewed lustances in which foreign powers have given us just came of complaint need not here be detailed. The extracts from the correspondence of the State Department, which accompany this message, will sdied each further information as can be given with-out detriment to the public interest, and we must reserve for the fature such action as may then be deemed advisable to secure regress FINANCES. Tour special attention is carportly in-vited to the report of the Secretary, of the Tresory, abbailted in confermi-ty with law. The facts therein dis-closed are far from discouraging, and dem one trate that, with judicious legislation, we shall be applied to meet all the expression of castrate that, with judicious legislation, we shall be easied to meat all the expension of the war from our abundant resources, and avoid, at the same time, such an accumulation of dibt as would recar at all doubtful our capacity to redeem it.

A general militia law is needful in the interest of public defense. The Constitution, by vertice the power to Convress, imposes on it the day of providing "for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the Confederate S ates." The great diversity in the levilation of the averal States. iversity in the legislation of the several States om this subject, and the absence of any provis-ion establishing an exact method for calling the militia into the Confederate service, are orger to be suffered to impade defensive legislation in relation to the cav-forming that branch of the service.

The recommendation hitherto often made is again renewed, that some messure is adopted for the reorganization and consolidation of companies and regiments when so far reduced in tumbers as an igually to impair their efficiency. It is the more necessary that this should be done, as the absence of legislation on the matter has forced generals in the field to resatject has forced generals in the field to re-sort to various expedients for approximating the desired and I. Is surely an evil that a command g officer should be placed in a po-sition which forces upon him the choice of allowing the efficiency of his command to be seriously impaired, or of strempting to supply by the exercise of doubtful authority the want of proper legal provision. The regard for the service with credit, and which is believed to at ject has forced generals in the field to reserved with eredit, and which is believed to served with credit, and which is believed to be the controlling motive that has aitherto obstructed legislation on this subject, however homorable and proper, may be carried to a point which seriously believes the public good; and it this but the case it can exacely be questioned which of the two considerations about be deemed paramount.

The question in dispute between the two Governments relative to the exchange of prisouers of war has been frequently presented in former messages and reports, and is fully rested by the Secretary. The soliciteds of the Government for the relief of our captive fallow-ctuzens has known no abatement, but has, on the contrary, been still more deeply evoked by the additional sufferings to walca they have been wantonly subjected, by depur-al-m of adequate food, clothlar, and ruel, which they were not even permitted to purches from the prison sutiers. Finding that the seemy attempted to exercise there expe-rous treatment by the unfounded allegation that it was retalistory for like conduct on our par', an offer was made by us with a view of ending all pretext for such recriminations or Beyond this itmit oud these employments it does not seem to me desirable, under existing circumstances, to go. A broad moral distinction exists between the use of slaves as adding the the distance of the control of t idiers in the defense of their homes, and the solders in the defense of their homes, and the incitement of the same persons to insurrection sgainst their masters. The one is justifiable, if necessary; the other is in'quitous and unworthy of a civilized people; and such is the judgment of all writers on public law, as well as that expressed and inelated on by our encules in all wars prior to that sow waged against us. By none bave the practices, of which they are now guilty, been denounced with greater severity than themselves in the two wars with Great Britain in the least and in two wars with Great Britain in the last an the present century; and in the Declaration of Independence of 1776, when anumeration was made of the wrongs which justified the revolt from Great Britain, the climax of agreety was leamed to be reached only when the Engl from Great Britain, the climax of aircelty was deemed to be reached only when the English monarch was denounced as having "excited domestic insurrection amongst us."

The subject is to be viewed by us, therefore, solely in the light of policy and our social economy. When so regarded, I must dissent from those who advise a general levy and arming of the slaves for the duty of solders. Until our white population shell provales until our characteristic for the armies we require and can afford to keep in the field, to employ as a soldier the negro, who has merely been trained to labor and as a laborer, for the white man accustomed from his youth to the use of direarms, would scarcely be deemed wise or advantageous by any; and this is the question now before us. But should the ubsection now before us. But should then be our decision. Whether our view embraces what would, is so extreme a case, be the sum of misery entailed by the dominion of the enemy, or be restricted solely to the effect upon the welfare and happiness of the negro population themselves, the result would be the same. The appailing demoralization, suffering, disease and death which have been caused by partially onbstituting the invadars' aystem of policy for the kind relation previously substating between the master and clave, have been a sufficient demonstration that external interference with our instituting of demeatic alavery is productive of evil only. If the subject involves no the statuted on the request to send certain articles for our prisoners at Andersoaville. Thinge have or be restricted solely to the effect upon the welfare and happiness of the negro population themselves, the result would be the same. The appalling demoralization, suffering, disease and death which have been esmand by partially and stituting the invadars aystem of policy for the kind relation previously subsisting between the master and slave, have been a sufficient demonstration that external interierence with our institution of dementic slavery is productive of evil only. If the subject involve no other equalities of the subject involve no other equalities of the subject involve no other equalities. tive of evil only. If the subject involve no other consideration than the mere right of changed since, and I may have to go in person property, the sacrifices heretofore made by our people have been such as to permit no doubt of their readiness to surrender every possession in order to secure their independence. But the social and political question, which is exclusively under the control of the several States, has a far wider and more anduring importance than that of peculiary interest. In its manifold phases it embraces the stability of our republican institutions, resting during Importance than that of peculiary interest. In its manifold phases it embraces the stability of our republican institutions, resting on the actual political equality of all its citization, and includes the fulfillment of the take which has been so happly begun—that of Christianizing and Improving the condition of the Africans who have, by the will of Providence, been placed in our charge. Comparing the results of our own experience with those of the experiments of others who have borne similar relation to the experience with those of the experiments of others who have borne similar relation to the Airlean race, the people of the several States of the Confederacy have abundant reason to be satisfied with the pust, and to use the greatest circumspection in determining their course. These considerations, however, are rather applicable to the improbable contingency of our need of resorting to this element of resistance than to our present condition. If the reccommendation above made, for the training of forty thousand negroes for the service indicated, shall meet your approval, it is constain that even this limited number, by their preparatory training in intermediate duties, would form a more valuable reserve utics, would form a more valuable reserve the expl force, in case of urgency, than three-fold their number suddenly cilled from field-hoor, while a fresh levy could, to a certain extent, supply their places in the apecial service for which they are now employed. OTHER DEPARTMENTS. The regular sanual reports of the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Navy and the Postmaster General are appended, and give ample information relative to the condition of the respective departments. They contain sug gestions for legislative previsions required to remedy such defects in the existing laws as have been disclosed by experience, but none of so general important a character as to re-quire that I should do more than recommend

peaceful solution of the issues which the op-emy has referred to the arbitrament of arms has been too often manifested and is too well known to need new assurances. But while it is true that Individuals and parties in the Uni-ted States have indicated a desire to substitute reason for force, and by negotiation to stop the further sacridce of buman life, and to arrest the calamittees which now sill of both countries, the authorities who courrol the Government of our enemies have too often and too clearly expressed their resolution to make no peace except on terms of our uncon-ditional submission and degradation, to leave us any hope of the creation of hostilities un-til the detusion of their ability to conquer us is dispelled. Among those who are already disposed for peace, many are scinated by principle and by disapproval and ab-norrence of the in quitous warfare that their Government is waging, while others are moved by the conviction that it is no longer to the interest of the United States to continue a struggle in which success is unattainable. GUERRILLAS AT SALVISA-STORES ROBBER -

At an early hour Monday morning the quiet little town of Salvisa, Mercer county, Kentucky, was thrown into considerable excitement by the entrance into the town of some twenty mounted guerrillas. Their sole object seemed to be robbery and nothing else. They first proceeded to the store of William Palmer, and robbed him of four hundred dollars, worth of goods, a fine shot gun and a full blooded borre. After riding the store of Mr. Palmer, they next proceeded to the stora of Wood Forst, from which they took over $500 worth of goods of various descriptions. Before the guerrilles entered the town they stopped at the form of Mr. McAfee, frem which they carried off a large number of fine horses. Only some twenty guerrillas entered 'he town, but there were some forty a few miles from the town. The guerrilles left before the stage passed through the place. They moved off in the direction of Chaplin Hill. A squad of Federal cavalry from Harradaburg were atarted in purenit of the guerrilles, but had not overtaken them when our informent laft.

STOLEN Unironms.—The attention of the Government has often been called to the large number of men not soldiers wearing the ivery of the United States. The habit of wearing soldiers' clothing has become almost universal among teamsters, laborers, and "agenta for bounty jumpers." It is high time that this ontrage apon the Government should be stopped. None but a soldier in the service of the United States has a right to wear the nuiforms, and all others are liable at any time to be arrested as deserters and sent to the front. There is also an act of Congress, approved March 16, 1802, by which they can be made to pay a fine ol "three buadred dollars,"

(CALLOW OLD RESPACIFICATION IN THE MANAGEMENT OF THE MANAGEMENT OF

MERCHANT TAILORS

From the Boston Leader. THE SOLDIER'S DOG.

- Re starts from the hearth with a low, sad whine, As the night wind rattles the casement frame, And looks at me with eyes that shine as if through tears when I speak your name. Yonder your empty thair by the wall Stands, half in the shadow and half in the light, And the old clook ticks in the silent hall Like a shuddering pulse of the dreary night.
- A click of the latch at the garden gate.

 Some sound like steps on the upper floors,
 In the still long hours when we sit and waitPerhaps for your face at the open doors—
 And eigh at last as the liex tree
 Shakes on the pane, and the fancy dies;
 Then he lays his shaggy head down on my km
 And looks at me eilit with those wistful eyes

- Does not a thought of the sammers dead
 E'er hand him, following mate and slow Down the dim old paths we need to tread
 In the purple moraling of long ago?
 Some long spant wind in the bearded grain,
 Some lightsome carol on hedge or thorn,
 Lost choes caught from the reaper's strain
 Among the laurels and shining corn?
- Among the laurels and shining cora?

 He listene, I think, for your footsteps still,
 In the depths of the woodlands, gray and old,
 Where the comfortless storms go solbling at will
 And the maples are casting their tawny gold—
 For the lightsome call that he used to hear
 Through the sharp, dead rustle of leaf and spray
 But the old ways now are lonely and sere,
 And the roar of the cannon is far away;

 Here for a ways and hower and way.

- And the roar of the cambon is a way.

 Far, far away, old Rover and we Must wait at the suadewy hearth alone, Haunted for aye by some tone of glee,
 Some sleepless shoat of the glad days gone.

 Come close to my side—therel your rough paws so
 And your brown head here—let the liex-leaves Whirl on the pane—ah, we all must know That the heart that loves is the heart that grieves
- That he neart that twee is the search as a way, where the bellowing batteries' light Reddens the dark of the Southern sky, He hee laid him down on the turf to-sight, Thinking, Rover, of you and I. Grim with the smoke of the trench, or worn With the toil of the battle, yet seeing there Tho lights of home through the distance burn, And the faces that watch by his empty chair.
- And the faces that watch by his empty data.

 Ah, well the hours grow derk and late;
 There will come no step on the silent floors,
 No hand to-night at the garden gate,
 No smiling face at the open doors.
 The shadows deepen along the wall,
 But one star shines through the falling rain,
 They trust the best who have staked their allLie down, old friend, at my feet again.

A SISTER'S SACRIFICE. "Oh, dear me, Marie, are you not tired of this work, work, day after day, and no change? These words were spoken by a very pret ty girl, sitting in a most comfortable little parlor, one side of which was formed of a wide screen lined with green silk, which divided it from another portlon of the room fitted up as a jewelry store.

Marie and Jeanne were the daughters of Pierre Galoubet, a diamond jeweler, re-nowned more for his taste and honesty than for his fortune or his luxury. He was a widower, with two daughters.

Marie and Jeanne were the very idols of his heart. Pierre had been a soldier in his youth, like most Frenchmen, and during his absence in Algiers his wife died. When he came back a kind neighbor took him to her cottage and, leading him to a cradle, showed him two little infants sleeping side by side on the same pillow. Pierre knew that in his absence a child had been born to him, but he had received no communica tion from home for more than a year before his return. He therefore turned from the children to his neighbor with a look of in-

"Are they both my children?" said he. "Why, no," replied Jaquinette. "There's a whole history about them, and, Pierre, as you are a clever man, and have traveled all over the world, perhaps you will be able to settle a point that has puzzled us ever since the death of your wife." "What is it?

"Why, which of these two is your daugh-

"Which? Why, whose is the other?" "Oh! one day, about a month after the birth of your child, when your wife opened the door one morning, she found on the threshold one of these infants. She knew which it was, but you know poor Mme. Pierre died suddenly, and she never had time to tell me which daughter was yours."

Again Pierre leaned over the babies, and as they opened their eyes and smiled on him, Pierre felt as if both were appealing to his heart, both asking his protection.

From that hour Pierre Galoubet called Jeanne, who both adored their father, helped him in his business. Marie kept the books, and Jeanne, who designs for the settings of the diamonds. They were now both eighteen; at least, knowing the age of one, Pierre had always making a fortune, bu', thanks to the management of Jeanne, they were in easy and comfortable circumstances.

Of late a cloud, however, had risen on even looked pale and thin, receiving her drawing a stroke. Now, on this evenlng, when the sisters were alone together, Jeanne had pushed the paper from her with disgust, and, throwing down her pencil, had declared her dissatisfaction to her

"Jeanne," said Marie, looking up, "you have never felt dissatisfaction before; but you are unhappy, and you will always be so until you confide what troubles you to your best friends, your father and your sister." "Not to my father-I dare nol; but to you, Jeanne. Oh! sister, I am so wretched!"

"Wretched?-why, what has happened?" "Marie," said Jeanne, sitting down on a stool at her feet, "listen, but do not look on me. Some months ago, you remember, I taken away, I am glad to know that the came home on Sunday morning from vagabond sleeps in our blood and awakes church, where I had gone with our servant, with a sprained ankle.

"Well, I had fallen—slipped off the mar-ble steps of the church, and fainted from the Well, as I lay there and the crowd began to gather around me, a gentleman advanced, and, putting aside those who crowded over me, lifted me np in his arms. Preceded by his servants, who had made way for hlm, he carried me to his carriage, and, placing me in it, asked our servant our address and drove me home.

"He was young, handsome, and in manner so fascinating as to have been able to dispense with either, Marie. The next time I went out I met him. I have often seen him since; he loves me—I love him."

"Well, if he is an honest man, true and sincere in his love, why should you be unhappy? You know your father will con-

"He is the Duc Octave de Blossac." "The Duc de Blossac, Jeanne?"

"But not an honest man, or he would never have dared to speak to you of love."
"He is an honest man, for when he spoke to me of love he told me that he could not to me; he offered never to marry." "But he did not offer to marry you?"

"You know that was impossible. So we are parted, I suppose, forever, and that is why I am wretched."

Jeanne," said Marie, "if he loved you-I will not talk thus to you, you are blinded by love—I will tell you to think of our Commend me to Shakspears's vagabands father, whose only hope we both are, whose only love we both are."

"Yes, my father, my own dear father, ut his love cannot be the only love of my me the person who claims one of you; told me the whole history; but now, am I to part with either of you?"

with either of you?"
"Which of us, father, is not your child?"
"Here, precisely, is the pussle; we cannot tell, but I cannot give up either of you, for I love one as well as the other,"
"We both love you as our father, we de not want to leave you; we can love no other father but you."

"The daughter that is not mine has neither father nor mother, it is her mother's mother who claims her. But she will give her what I cannot give—a great name, riches, and a position in society far above the one i have placed herin. Which of you

Jeanne and Marie both kissed his cheek; neither spoke. Jeanne was thinking that the advantage he set before her would have removed the obstacles which separated her from Octave, but she only sighed deeply; not for an instant did she dream that she could ever lay claim to all this brilliant fortune; but Marie, taking her father's hand, calmly asked him if there was no sign by which they thought to recognize the rightful heir?

"The heiress of the Marquis de Valbourg as a sign—so says a last letter from her nother. I do not think it is love that makes them as anxious to find her, but the Duc de Bloesac is heir to the property, and the revenues of all the estates have been for years accumulating. Until the death of this girl is proved the Duo de Blossao cannot touch a penny. Jeanne, what is the matter with you?"

"Nothing, father, I feel faint."

"My darling, sit down."
"Well, you must know that by an amicable arrangement made years ago, when the existence of this daughter was suspected, it was decided that when she should be found and installed in her rights, she should be-come the wife of M. do Blossac, that young, handsome Duke, you know; he has been here often to buy diamonds-but Marie Marie, look at your sister, she has fainted!

Jeanne was conveyed to her room, for she had indeed fainted. An hour afterward Marie slowly entered the room, where her father was anxiously pacing the floor.
"Father," said Marie, "Jeanne is better, whe will sleep soon, and then all will be right. Father, have you ever had a favorite between us?"

"Yes; the one who was sick when you were children I always loved best; now that Jeanne is suffering and seems unhappy, why darling, I think I love her-"Not better than your Marie—that can never be. But would you be content to see Jeanne happy?"

"At any cost?"

"At any cost. "Tell me the sign by which this lady says she can recognize her granddaughter." "A violet mark imprinted in the way in which sailors mark their arms, put over

"Then," said Marie, "you must love me best, father, for I am your child, and Jeanne is Duchesse de Blossao." "To lose one of you is terrible, my dar-lings; but Jeanne will be a great lady; do you think that will console her?"

"I do, though she will never forget us." That night Marie knelt by her Jeanne's edside; the door was locked and the sisters were alone.

"Marle!" exclaimed Jeanne, "I canno hear of this sacrifice. What right have I to deprive you---' "Of nothing, my sister. You love the Duke; I do not. If I claim the inheritance must become his wife. I cannot; so now Still Jeanne resisted; but Marie was firm, and, drawing aside the night dress with a firm and light hand, she pricked the shape of a violet just over her sister's heart. Then rubbling it with gunpowder, she mide the mark indelible. "Now, Jeanne," said she, "that is exactly like the one I have on me-the one probably my poor mother made. But I love Pierro, who has been to us a father. I have no taste for splendor. Be happy, my own sister, and do not forget us."

So Jeanne, in great state, was recognized as the heiress of Mmc. de Valbourg, and a few days afterward was married with great pemp and ceremony to the Duc de For a few days she had hesitated, then both children his, and Marie and Jeanne, she had determined not to accept her sisas he christened them (for they had no name until his return), became the idols of she could have renounced, not Octave, so When they were grown up Marie and forever she buried her secret in her bosom. Without one pang did Marie watch her sister drive away in her brilliant equipage; with a smile she looked up into her father's had a great talent for drawing, which had been cultivated, made the drawings and designs for the drawings. till the day of his death, ever knowing that the child who made his home so happy, who loved him so faithfully, a woman full put them down as the same age. Their of sense, simplicity and sensibility, was father's strict honesty had prevented his the heiress of the house of Valbourg, and should have worn a ducal coronet.

A Discourse on Vagabonds. The fresh, rough, heathery parts of human nature, where the air is freshest, and where the household so full of the sunshine of af-fection. Jeanne had grown pensive, and by cultivated fields. Every one is making himself or herself useful. Every one is proting for hours, pencil in hand, without it. I love a little eccentricity. I respect honest prejudices. I admire foolish enthusiasm in a young head better than a wise scepticism. It is high time, it seems to me, that a moral game law were passed, for the preservation of the wild and vagrant feelings of human nature.

Ah, me! what a world this was to live in two or three centuries ago, when it was getting itself discovered-when the sunset gave up America. Then were the Arablan Knights commonplace, enchantments a matter of course, and romance the most extraordinary thing in the world. was courting Nature—now he has married her! Yet, for all that time has brought and now and then.

Overlay nature as you please, here and there some bit of rock or mound of abori-ginal soil will creep out, with the wild flowers growing upon it sweetening the air. Genius is a vagabond. Art is a vagabond. Enterprise is a vagabond. The first fine day in spring awakes the gipsy in the blood of the English workman, and inconthe English gentlemen, lapped in the most luxurious civilisation, and with the thousand powers and resources of wealth at his command, descends oftentimes a fierce unrest, a Bedouin-like horror of cities and the cry of the money-changer, and in a month

Vagabonds have molded the world into its present shape. Respectable people swarm in the track of the vagabond as rooks in the track of the plewshare. Respectable people do little in the world, except storing wine cellars and massing fortunes for spendthrift heirs. Respectable well-to-do Grecians shook their heads over Leonidas and his three hundred when they marry me, but he offered to devote his life went down to Thermopyles. Respectable Spanish churchmen, with shaven crowns, scouted the dream of Columbus. Respectable German folks attempted to dissuade Luther from appearing before Charles and the Princes and electors of the empire. Nature makes us vagabonds—the world

-the most delightful in the world. His sweet-blooded and liberal nature blossomed into all the fine generosities as naturally as an apple bough into pink blossoms and odors. It would be better if we could have, At this moment the door opened and along with our modern enlightenment, our Pierre himself entered the room. His daugh-higher tastes and purer habits, a greater inrierre nimself entered the room. His daughters rose, and both rushed up to him, throwing their arms around him.

"My dearest father, you look sad; tell me what is the matter with you?"

"Ah! girls, girls, my own two children —you are both my children, are you not?"

"Yes."

"Semething her lastes and purer habits, a greater individuality of thought and manner; better that every man should be allowed to grow in his own way, so long as he does not infringe on the rights of his neighbor, or insolently thrust himself between him and the sun.

"Yes."

A little mere air and light should be let in upon life. I should think the world has proved to me that some one besides me has the right to the love of one of you."

"Ah! father, what do you mean?"

"You know your own history—you know that one of you is not my danghter."

"We have never liked to think of it."

"We have never liked to think the world has stood long enough under the drill of Adju-tant work; the posture is wearisome, and Fashion.
